MN Brackets and Descriptions

Author: Steven Rudolph
Version: 1.0
Date: May 3, 2025

About this document

This document contains descriptors related to individuals' scores on the Multiple Natures Test. For each of the Multiple Intelligences and Multiple Natures, test-takers receive a score on a scale of 1-10, along with a paragraph description of what their score means. The scores are divided into seven categories or ranges:

9—10	Very High
8—8.5	High
6.5—7.5	Medium High
5—6	Medium
3.5—4.5	Medium Low
2—3	Low
0.5—1.5	Very Low

How to use this document

You can use this document while working with clients to help establish the accuracy of their MI and MN scores.

Gross Bodily Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an extraordinary level of physical aptitude, with an innate talent for movement and an insatiable appetite for activity. You are continuously engaged in sports, dance, or other types of activities that challenge and engage your body, possibly every day or at least three times a week. Your body plays a direct and crucial role in your profession, and you cannot imagine living without a regular regimen of physical activity or exercise. You have likely been praised and recognized for your exceptional skills and abilities in this area throughout your life, and you are often the go-to person when it comes to physical challenges.

8-8.5 (High)

When it comes to activities that engage your body, you look forward to them with great anticipation. With little energy or preparation, you can jump right into sports or physical activity and demonstrate excellence. When you are doing bodily things, you feel totally natural and at ease, and you can remember feeling this way almost all your life in just about every situation where you had to make use of your body. You could easily do a type of work that made use of your body because it comes so naturally and it gives you so much energy.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

When it comes to activities that engage your body, you can do them quite naturally. You can get absorbed in them with a little effort. You tend to learn quickly if you have to learn new sports or physical games, and you are self-motivated to do so. With only a little preparation you could demonstrate some pretty good skills in a variety of areas. If you had to make something physical part of your day-to-day work, you could do so, though if you had to do it all the time, it could take a little energy away from you. You have likely gotten compliments about activities in this realm when you've focused intently and worked hard at it.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to activities related to your body, you do OK--neither do you do too well, nor too poorly. If you make a good deal of effort, you could get into sports or physical endeavors, and even demonstrate some competence here and there, however, it will only be like this in some circumstances. You'd need to motivate yourself quite a bit to get into such activities, and you would likely be modest about the gains you'd make and your performance. After some time, you'd surely want to take a break to do something that comes more naturally.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

When it comes to activities related to your body, you typically find yourself performing below average. It's challenging for you to get into sports and similar activities, as they tend to take away energy from you, and there are little returns in this area compared to the energy you invest. It would require a lot of preparation for you to demonstrate even a low level of performance. You rarely get compliments in physical related activities, and it's been like that for as long as you can remember.

2-3 (Low)

Physical types of activities are just not your cup of tea. You find it very hard to get yourself motivated to get into them, and when you do, you find it even harder to stay there. Being involved in sports or other similar activities takes a lot of energy away from you and when you do them you feel very unnatural. There's no way you could make activities that revolve around this ability part of your professional activities. You've been like this for as long as you can remember, and have few examples or memories of praise for activities done in this space.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You possess a minimal level of physical aptitude, with little interest or inclination for movement. You find it challenging to motivate yourself to engage in any form of physical activity, and when you do, you rarely find success or pleasure. Physical activity, sports, dancing, or other active pursuits hold little appeal for you, and you have likely not engaged in them for weeks or months. You may struggle with coordination and control of your body, and making physical activity a part of your life would be nearly impossible. This has been a consistent pattern throughout your life, with little recognition or praise for activities in this area. Your body is often seen as a hindrance rather than an asset.

Fine Bodily Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an extraordinary level of Fine Bodily Intelligence, with exceptional dexterity, precision and fine motor skills that are truly unmatched. Activities that require manual dexterity and attention to detail are performed with ease and mastery, and you are able to create intricate and beautiful works of art or engineering with your hands effortlessly. Your fingers are active and nimble even when you are not paying attention, using your hands is second nature to you. Your recreational activities most likely involve the use of your hands and your professional work most likely does as well. You are a master in your field, and your hands are often compared to those of a surgeon or a craftsman. You are highly sought after for tasks that require precision and attention to detail.

8-8.5 (High)

Your hands are steady and reliable in everything you do. Sometimes they feel as though they have a mind of their own. Your fingers are nimble and competent--even when you're not paying attention. You can do manual-related activities for very long periods, and when you do, you are sure to get compliments for whatever you are doing or creating. This is true in just about every situation where you engage them--and has been like that for as long as you can remember. You get energized from using your hands and could easily do work that makes use of them extensively.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You make use of your hands quite naturally--with a bit of focus, you can do excellent work with them making very few mistakes along the way. Your fingers have tended to be reliable since you were a child, and in most situations, they have performed to help you achieve different types of things. You only need a little motivation to get into activities that use your manual dexterity, and when you do, you get energy from using them. If you wanted, you could do work that would make use of them, though perhaps not all the time.

5-6 (Medium)

Your manual dexterity is about average--neither very weak nor very strong. When it comes to using your hands, you would need to focus quite a bit and do a lot of preparation to use them skillfully. And even then, you'd be worried about making mistakes. Even if you make an effort, your fingers don't always obey your commands. If you think back, you can't really remember too many times where your hands were star performers. Manual things just don't come so naturally. While you could use your hands a little bit in your work, you might find it very challenging to make them the center of your activities.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

You can only work for short periods of time with your hands as they require quite a bit of focus and energy to get them to do what you want them to do. It's hard for you to get absorbed into manual activity as it doesn't come naturally to you. You rarely hear compliments for things that require a lot of dexterity, and even when you make your best effort, you make only modest progress. You tend to void hands-on type of work, and you'd far prefer to do things that make use of your other abilities.

2-3 (Low)

No matter how hard you try, your hands never seem to respond the way that you'd like them to. You find it challenging--and even frustrating--to do activities that require good dexterity. Even if you put all your attention into it, you'd still find it hard to get results from your manual efforts. There's no way you would want to rely on your digits for the mainstay of your work as using them drains your batteries so much. You'd be much happier making use of other abilities that come to you more easily.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You possess a minimal level of Fine Bodily Intelligence, with little interest or inclination for manual dexterity and precision. You find it extremely difficult to perform even the most basic tasks that require the use of your hands, and tasks that require attention to detail are impossible for you. You avoid activities that require manual dexterity, and you struggle to even hold a pencil or a tool properly. You find it hard to complete even small manual jobs and it causes you a great deal of strain and stress, which often leads to giving up on them. Your hands are often seen as a hindrance rather than an asset, and you struggle to make them a part of your life.

Interpersonal Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an extraordinary level of social skills, with an innate ability to connect with others on a deep level. You feel extremely comfortable in any social setting, engaging in conversations and building meaningful connections with colleagues, friends, and even strangers. Interacting with others is a central part of your life and brings you immense pleasure and satisfaction. You possess magnetic personality, often sought after for your ability to bring people together and build strong relationships.

8-8.5 (High)

When you interact with others you easily get absorbed. You need little or no motivation and you can enter into discussions or situations that get you to face to face with people. When you're with others, it gives you a lot of energy, and you can spend very long periods of time in the company of others. You are like this in all contexts and get praised frequently for your people skills. You could definitely make interacting with others a very central part of your work activities.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You feel you are pretty adept at interacting with others. You can easily get absorbed in conversations or spending time with friends, colleagues--and even strangers. And you can do so for a pretty long time. For the most part, people energize you, and you feel natural in their company. At the same time, you don't see yourself totally as a people person. You do like to spend time away from others. You could definitely make interpersonal interaction a strong part of your work--provided there were some other things to support it.

5-6 (Medium)

You feel ambivalent about spending time with others--if they are there, it's OK, and if not, it's also OK. Being in their company can take a bit of energy and focus--and it's even possible for you to get a little absorbed at times. However, you need some motivation to get deep into conversations or interactions with others. You might get an occasional compliment about your ability to interact with others, but given a choice, you would most likely not make people the central part of your work--at least you would probably not like to do so all the time.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

You're not so much a people person. While you don't mind interacting with others from time to time, you would prefer to spend more time by yourself rather than in others' company. To get connected with people, it takes focus and motivation and usually winds up taking away quite a bit of energy. You are not so likely to get into networking or being a social butterfly and would probably like to avoid too much exposure to people in whatever work you do.

2-3 (Low)

You don't like to spend time with others, as you find doing so takes a lot of energy away from you. When you're with people, you find it unnatural or awkward and have to work very hard just to interact. You've always been like this and are this way in just about every context. You've probably heard others comment about your not being much of a people person, and given the chance to work more by yourself, you'd greatly prefer to do so.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You possess a minimal level of social skills, with little interest or inclination for interacting with others. You find it extremely difficult to connect with others and feel uncomfortable in social settings. You avoid social interactions as much as possible, and struggle to initiate or maintain conversations. You prefer to be alone and have a hard time building relationships.

Logical Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

Logic and analytical thinking come naturally to you, and you find it effortless to understand and solve complex problems. You possess a razor-sharp mind and have an innate ability to see patterns and relationships where others can't. Your analytical skills are unparalleled, and you are sought after for your ability to make sense of complex data and information. Numbers and logical reasoning are an integral part of your professional and leisure activities, and you find immense satisfaction in using your mind to solve problems.

8-8.5 (High)

You have always loved numbers and logical, analytical reasoning. Whatever the situation, your mind is turned to numbers, related calculations, and also problem-solving. Handling numbers gives you great energy, as well as making logical arguments and linking information together. Without the need for special concentration, you make a few mistakes when mathematics and analysis are involved. You are used to being praised for your computational and problem-solving abilities, which can absorb you for long periods of time. Making use of these skills in your daily work is something you would appreciate very much since it is so easy for you!

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a good relationship with numbers, and logical, analytical reasoning. While you don't consider yourself gifted in mathematics, you feel things come pretty easy to you--especially if you make a little effort. You can get absorbed in numerical-related activities, and with some focus can do some impressive work. After all, it gives you the energy to do so. You might never have topped your math class, but you have surely earned some accolades along the way. While you might want to make numbers or analysis and problem-solving to be a strong part of your work activity, you might not want to make it the sole focus of your activities.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to math or logical and analytical reasoning, you consider yourself to be neither good nor bad--just right down the middle. It takes you a good amount of energy and motivation to get focused on the world of numbers or problem-solving, and although you can get into it for a little while, it's not something you can stay into for a long period of time. You likely don't have a history of scoring top marks in math classes, mostly because the amount of time and energy you would need to put into it would be far too much effort. While you would not necessarily be afraid of taking on a math problem, you would surely not want to make numbers the central part of your working activities.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

You have always tended to shy away from working with numbers or with logical and analytical reasoning. It takes you a lot of energy to focus on them, and even when you do, you still feel you cannot totally rely on your numerical abilities. Doing mathematical activities drains your battery significantly. You rarely hear compliments in this area, which has never really been your strong suit. As a result, you've never really been motivated to spend much time doing activities related to numbers. You would surely prefer not to make this area a central part of your work activities.

2-3 (Low)

You've never been comfortable with numbers, logic, or analytical reasoning person. Somehow, you've always struggled with math, and have found that it takes huge amounts of energy with little results for the effort you make. You find it hard to relate to the numerical world and find that even when you focus, you still make mistakes. You find it hard to get motivated to do mathematical-related activities and are sure that you would not like to do similar things as a part of your daily work.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You possess a minimal ability in logic and analytical thinking, and find it challenging to understand even the simplest of mathematical concepts. You struggle with numbers and logical reasoning, and find it difficult to make sense of complex data and information. You avoid activities that require logical thinking, as it causes you a great deal of strain and stress. You have a hard time understanding cause-and-effect relationships and solving problems.

Linguistic Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess a masterful command of language, effortlessly switching between words and phrases to convey your thoughts with precision and eloquence. You find pleasure in language-related tasks such as writing, speaking, and even reading, and you can easily get lost in those activities for hours on end. You are a linguistic virtuoso, capable of expressing yourself in ways that leave others in awe. You are not only proficient in your native language, but you likely speak at least one other language fluently and possibly more, making you a polyglot. Others recognize your exceptional abilities in this area and it's an integral part of your professional or leisure activities.

8-8.5 (High)

Words come easily to you, you attach great importance to them and you express them with great precision. You are a person of words. Language has always come easily to you, and you find it easy to get absorbed into writing or speaking. With just a little effort, you learn new vocabulary words easily--and quickly memorize quotes and lyrics. You are highly motivated to engage with language activities, including learning new language--and can do so for long periods of time with great pleasure. You've surely received plenty of praise from others about your gift for letters in many different situations. You could easily put this ability at the center of your work activities. You rarely make linguistic mistakes and spot mistakes all the time in use of language. I can express myself easily and effortlessly in writing.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a friendly relationship with a wide range of language use. You tend to remember new words of foreign language and use them with relative ease, though on occasion you might get tripped up about how to express something the right way. You enjoy using your linguistic skills You have the ability to get absorbed in reading, writing, or writing, and can engage your abilities effectively with little preparation. When you focus your efforts, you can express yourself in a manner that draws compliments. If necessary, you can express your thoughts in writing.

5-6 (Medium)

You have a mixed relationship with language. There are some occasions where you feel capable of expressing yourself effectively, although sometimes you search for the right expression. Engaging in linguistic activities doesn't come easily, but with some effort, you can get absorbed in it, and develop your skills well. While you can't recall being terrible in your experience with language, you also find it hard to recall having exceptional skills in this area. Focusing on the use of languages (foreign or not) in a professional activity requires concentration and effort, and you need a lot of preparation to be able to do a good job.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

Language has never been your strong point. You find it difficult to express yourself through words--either spoken or written. It is typically a struggle to find the right word at the right time. When you need to communicate, it requires a considerable amount of energy to convey your ideas effectively. You rarely hear compliments about your linguistic ability. Others frequently point out mistakes in your use of words, grammar, or style. If you make a significant, dedicated effort, you do notice some improvement, though it requires quite a bit of energy to get results. Often you know what you want to say, but have a difficult time expressing it.

2-3 (Low)

Language is something that doesn't come easily to you. You find it extremely difficult to express yourself through words--either spoken or written--and feel that it limits you. In just about every context, even if you make a significant effort, you find that you struggle in the world of language. And it's been this way for as long as you can remember. If you make an effort to work with verbal forms of expression, it drains your batteries significantly, with little results to show. You frequently have ideas in your head, but find it a challenge to put them into words. You are used to lackluster feedback when it comes to working in this area.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

Expressing yourself through language is an immense challenge for you. You find it extremely difficult to find the right words, and even basic communication can be a struggle. You may have difficulty understanding or being understood by others, and have a hard time with reading and writing. You may struggle with basic grammar and vocabulary, and even simple conversations can be draining. You may have difficulty learning new languages and have little interest in language-related activities. This skill is not an integral part of your job or leisure activities, and you may have difficulty in finding a profession that fits your low linguistic abilities.

Graphic Visual Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an extraordinary connection to the visual world. Your skills in drawing, painting, photography and design are exceptional and you produce incredible works with minimal effort. Your attention to detail allows you to spot even the subtlest differences, and your understanding of color, composition, and form is masterful. Your self-expression through visual means is an integral part of your life, both as a hobby and as a professional pursuit. You have received recognition and accolades for your talents.

8-8.5 (High)

You have a deep and intimate relationship with the visual world. Activities such as drawing, coloring, painting, or photography, graphic design, and other types of visual arts are ones where you can do extraordinary things even with very little effort. You can lose yourself in patterns and details of the things you notice--pictures, photographs, and textile patterns. You have many experiences in your life where your visual skills reached a level of excellence, and you've received recognition in terms of others' praise or awards. You feel you could easily put your abilities in this domain in the center of what you do for a living.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

The visual world is an intriguing one for you. You have a facility with activities such as photography, graphic design, or visual arts, and find that when you make an effort, that you can produce things of merit. It does take energy and a little preparation, but in this domain, you learn rather quickly and can get absorbed in design-related activities. While you can quickly reach levels of competence, you find that you need to stay focused to sustain your growth and to avoid making mistakes. You find your skills to be solid here, and you get some compliments from time to time when you exhibit them.

5-6 (Medium)

Your relationship to graphic and visual arts such as design, drawing, coloring, photography, and more is mixed. At times you feel you have decent skills in this domain; at other times, you feel as though you just don't have it. Sometimes you can get into sketching something out, and you find it pleasurable, but to bring it to a level of excellence takes quite a bit of effort--often more than you're willing to invest. In order to do work in this area with competence, you need to concentrate or you're likely to make mistakes.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

Your visual skills are not your strongest suit. When it comes to activities such as drawing, coloring, photography or painting you have a hard time "seeing it". It takes quite a bit of energy and attention to produce something that is good--often more than you are willing to invest. You find it hard to do things related to design and need to focus intensely to avoid making simple mistakes. You find it hard to get absorbed in these activities as there is little return on your investment in terms of results or others' appreciation for your effort.

2-3 (Low)

Your visual skills tend to escape you. Whether it's drawing, coloring, photography, or painting, somehow whatever you intend to convey in this medium rarely comes out the way you intended. To use these skills takes a tremendous amount of effort, and you often feel reluctant to engage your abilities here because the return of your investment is so low, and because there aren't accompanying words of praise that could motivate you (in fact you tend to hear the opposite).

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You possess little to no aptitude for visual perception and representation. You find it difficult to see things that others see, and you have difficulty noticing details in things, patterns, similarities and differences between objects, and communicating visually. You have no interest in visual arts such as drawing, coloring, painting, graphic design, photography and digital visualisation, and you likely have no history of producing work in these fields. You may not even have a habit of doodling or making use of emojis to express yourself. Your visual skills are so weak that they are not an integral part of your hobby or professional activity.

Spatial Visual Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an extraordinary and unparalleled aptitude for the spatial world. The ability to work with three-dimensional objects and manipulate them in your mind comes effortlessly to you. You have a deep understanding of how things move and fit within space, and can effortlessly disassemble and reassemble things without the need for instructions. You excel in activities such as sculpting, assembling complex machinery, navigating through unknown terrains and even solving complex puzzles. This is an area that is extremely close to your heart, and you possess a rare level of expertise in this domain.

8-8.5 (High)

When it comes to the spatial world, you are at home. You have a facility working with things in three dimensions such as sculpting, using maps, and assembling things. Activities such as driving, parking a car, come easily to you, as you have a deep connection with how things move and fit within space. You work well in this area with very little focus or effort and can get absorbed in it for long periods of time. And more, you get energized from it.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

When it comes to the spatial world, you have a strong ability. Activities such as driving, using maps, and assembling things come somewhat easily to you. You're also quite capable of managing things in space--organizing furniture, packing things, and even working with 3-dimensional objects. You can engage in activities of this sort with little push and can get absorbed easily as well. You learn fairly fast in this domain, though to make significant achievement takes some energy and focus.

5-6 (Medium)

You have a mixed relationship with spatial activities such as driving, using maps, and assembling things. When you focus carefully on them, you can handle them adequately, however, if you devote any less attention than that, you're bound to make mistakes. Parking a car provides a considerable challenge, as does solve 3-dimensional puzzles such as a Rubik's Cube. While you can sometimes find your way with a GPS, you could just as easily get lost.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

Spatial activities such as driving, using maps, and assembling things don't resonate so much with you. Parking a car is a challenge that creates some tension, as is solving 3-dimensional puzzles such as a Rubik's Cube. Finding directions without a GPS can be a challenge. You need to expend a lot of energy to achieve things in this domain, and it typically requires a good deal of motivation to get yourself moving with spatial-related activities. It's not necessarily your cup of a team though you can get by here with quite a bit of effort.

2-3 (Low)

Spatial activities such as driving, using maps, and assembling things don't resonate with you at all. Parking a car is an extreme challenge that creates huge tension, as is solving 3-dimensional puzzles such as a Rubik's Cube. Finding directions--even with a GPS--is equally as hard. To assemble something such as furniture would take an extreme amount of focus and tremendous effort, which, even with all that work, still might not result in success. Somehow this is not an area that you feel natural in.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You have virtually no connection to the spatial world. Activities such as driving, using maps, assembling things, and solving 3-dimensional puzzles are extremely difficult for you. You find it hard to visualize things in 3D, and as a result, you tend to avoid them as they make you feel stressed, anxious, and disoriented. Even when you concentrate, you perform these activities very poorly. You have trouble finding your way around, even to places you have frequently visited. This is an area that you have little to no interest in, and you likely to avoid in the future.

Musical Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an extraordinary aptitude for music. It is an integral part of your life, and you have a natural talent for creating, performing and appreciating it. You have a profound understanding of music theory and can effortlessly compose, improvise and perform complex pieces. You can pick up new instruments and songs with ease, and engage in music-related activities for extended periods without getting bored. Music is a constant presence in your life, whether it's through your professional or leisure activities.

8-8.5 (High)

You have an extremely strong connection to musical things. You can learn a new instrument or a song with little or no effort, and you can engage yourself in music-related activities for very long periods of time without getting bored. Wherever you look you see music and you usually have songs playing in your head as you go about your day. Whether it’s a formal performance or something impromptu, you are used to people praising you for your musical skills--and you always have. If you wanted, you could surely make music a central part of your professional work.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a strong connection to musical things. You can learn a new instrument or song with just a little effort, and you can engage in music-related activities for periods of time without getting bored. Sometimes you might need some motivation to get started, but once you do, you find it a pleasurable space to be in. While you might not possess extremely high skills, if you focus on music-related tasks, you make fairly quick progress. If you chose to incorporate this ability in your main line of work, it would demand a good deal of attention to excel with it.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to engaging in musical activities, you have some ability. It requires that you focus a lot if you want to achieve something by playing an instrument or singing. Learning in this domain doesn't necessarily come easily, and you would need some motivation and energy to get your musical skills in gear. Although you might have doubts about becoming a professional musician, you can see a place where musical activities can revitalize you on occasion.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

Music hasn't necessarily been a strong point for you in your scheme of things. However, it has a role to play. To write or perform a song would require quite a bit of preparation and the results might be modest. Still, if you put enough time into it, you could just about pull it off. It takes a lot of energy and effort to get yourself focused in this domain, as well as quite a bit of motivation. It is unlikely that you would make use of musical activities as your main area of work, however, there are surely ways to incorporate it in your life on occasion where it will nourish you.

2-3 (Low)

Music is just not your strong suit. When it comes to keeping beat, you find it hard to maintain a steady rhythm. And when it comes to singing or playing in tune, you have a hard time hearing when you or others are off. Even when you spend a lot of energy and time with musical things, the returns on the investment are quite low. You find it a challenge to get into music-related activities and to remain focused on them for any length of time. It tends to take away energy and you'd require a lot of motivation to engage in musical things at all.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

Music holds little interest for you. You have no sense of rhythm and difficulty connecting with it. You have no interest in learning to play an instrument or participate in any musical activities. You find it hard to keep beat and have difficulty hearing when you or others are off-key. Even if you were to spend a lot of energy and time with musical things, the returns on the investment would be very low. You find it a challenge to engage in music-related activities and to remain focused on them for any length of time.

Intrapersonal Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You have an outstanding ability for self-reflection and self-awareness. Your capacity for contemplating various aspects of life is exceptional, and you find that with little effort, you can gain new insights about yourself, others, and the world around you. You have a strong interest in personal development and have acquired extensive knowledge about psychology, philosophy, and self-help. You are not only interested in understanding yourself better, but also in helping others to grow and develop. This ability is likely a central part of your professional and personal life.

8-8.5 (High)

You have a very high ability for self-reflection and contemplating the depths of life. Doing so comes naturally to you, and you find that with little or no effort, you can discover fascinating nuances about your thoughts, feelings, and emotions. For you, every context, quote, and interaction is a potential point for understanding yourself, others, and life more deeply. You find it easy to express what's happening inside of you. You are drawn almost magnetically to discussions or topics that deal with personal growth. Getting involved in these activities energizes you, and you could see how skills in this area could be utilized in your key areas of work. Empathy to interpersonal (the ability to understand, communicate, interact. People with this ability are able to listen attentively to others, to engage easily in conversation with strangers, to understand other people's motives, to understand from the smallest clues what another person thinks and feels)

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a strong ability for self-reflection and thinking about different aspects of life. Doing so comes somewhat naturally to you, and with a little effort, you can discover fascinating things about your thoughts, feelings, and emotions. You are inspired by books and movies that challenge your inner world and find topics related to the personal growth of high interest. While you can surely get immersed in exploring this space, you might wish to give it a break from time to time and focus on other topics. It can definitely energize you, and you could incorporate personal growth as part of your professional activities, though not necessarily to the exclusion of others.

5-6 (Medium)

You have an ability to explore your inner world, though, it takes an amount of effort to get focused there. You are mildly attracted to topics such as personal growth, and from time to time, find such topics bring you clarity and satisfaction. At the same time, you might not want to engage in self-development topics too much. Getting in and out of such states might require more energy than you're prepared to give. However, with the right situation and dedication, you can make reasonable progress along these lines.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

When it comes to exploring your inner world, it takes a good deal of effort to get you focused there. While you are not really attracted to topics such as personal growth, on rare occasions, you find that discussions related to this area can bring some clarity and satisfaction. However, getting into such states requires considerable energy and effort, so you likely engage in them only on occasion. You can understand how some people might find it exhilarating to spend time contemplating their own thoughts, feelings, and emotions, though you don't necessarily share their enthusiasm for it.

2-3 (Low)

Exploring your inner world doesn't come easily to you. Topics related to self-development or personal growth do not really get you motivated. As such, you would not likely seek out people or conversations to explore these matters. You would need to make a tremendous effort to delve into points related to the "inner world". Books and videos dedicated to self-help would not be on (or near) the top of your list. Somehow, time spent here doesn't seem to yield significant results.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You have little to no interest in exploring your inner self or understanding yourself and others better. The idea of self-reflection and introspection does not appeal to you, and you tend to avoid conversations or activities that revolve around self-help or personal growth. You believe that your thoughts, feelings, and emotions are fixed and unchangeable, and you see no value in trying to understand them better. You are content with your current state of being and do not feel the need to improve yourself. Your lack of self-awareness and introspection may make it difficult for you to connect with others and understand their behavior.

Naturalistic Intelligence

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an exceptional connection to the natural world, including plants, animals, and the environment. This connection is so deep and ingrained that it is almost as if nature is a part of you. You possess an encyclopedic knowledge of various species of flora and fauna and can identify them with ease. The mere act of being in nature is a transcendental experience for you, one that recharges your batteries and reinvigorates your soul. Your professional and recreational pursuits revolve around nature, and you may have a strong desire to make a positive impact on the environment.

8-8.5 (High)

You are extremely connected to the environment--plants, animals, and the environment. You have developed knowledge and skills that enable you to navigate the natural world in a deeply connected manner. Identifying different species comes easily to you, and spending time with various natural elements energizes and refreshes you. There is little or no effort required for you to get in sync with your environment, and you can quickly focus on it with no special preparation. It is easy to see how performing activities in this area could form a central part of your professional life.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You are connected to the environment--plants, animals, and the various elements around you. You have a decent knowledge of the natural world and have a good knowledge and understanding of various species of flora and fauna. Being outside and being connected to the environment is energizing, and it’s important for you to connect to some aspect of this world on a regular basis. While you feel strongly about things natural, you wouldn't necessarily want to be engaged with it all the time. If it were to play a role in your professional life, it would be possible as one element, though likely not the main focus.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to nature, you are equivocal--on one hand, you like the outdoors, animals, plants, and so on. At the same time, you wouldn't want to spend too much time in nature-related activities as it could get to be too much. It takes some effort to stop doing other things and to make a connection with the flora, fauna, and the creatures around you, but when you do, you find your experience to be generally positive and refreshing. Learning about the environment does not top your list of topics to explore, and you prefer to engage with nature for short periods of time so you can get back to other things.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

When it comes to nature, you don't necessarily jump into action. Whether it's activities related to animals, plants, or the great outdoors, you need to make clear and deliberate decisions to engage in them. It just takes a lot of focus and effort to get in sync with natural stuff, and finding that motivation is often a challenge. It can even leave you feeling drained. While you recognize it has value, experiencing the natural world is something you feel to be best done in small doses. Work activities related to this domain don't figure into your priority list.

2-3 (Low)

It requires a lot of effort and energy to connect to the natural world--plants, animals, the environment, and so on. To do so, you would need to focus intently. You don't spend time noticing the nuances of different flora or fauna or creatures around you. They are there, but not part of your scheme of things. On rare occasions, you might make a connection, but it tends to be fleeting. You likely avoid the outdoors and too much interaction with natural things as it demands too much from you.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You have virtually no connection to the natural world. The mere thought of spending time outdoors or interacting with plants and animals elicits feelings of discomfort and apathy. You have no interest in learning about or understanding the complexities of the natural world. You would be perfectly content to spend the entirety of your life indoors, surrounded by concrete and technology, never venturing outside. The concept of pet ownership or gardening is foreign to you and holds no appeal. The natural world is simply not a part of your world view.

Protective Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an intense sense of security, protection, and justice. Your focus is on ensuring that processes, rules, and safety measures are implemented in your environment and those of others. Compliance, order, and fairness are of the utmost importance to you, and they form the very foundation of your professional activities. Supervision and control is what you enjoy most in your work, and this quality shows itself daily, even if it is not part of your job profile.

8-8.5 (High)

You are driven by a strong sense of safety, security, and justice. You like to set the framework and encourage people to respect it, particularly by establishing procedures. You do not hesitate to propose your solutions. You often double-check or even triple-check things to make sure all is correct. Your energy naturally flows to thoughts and activities that ensure the protection of your environment. The pursuit of truth is a great motivator for you, and you delight in conversation or initiatives that get to the bottom of things. It takes little or no effort for you to spot injustice and to take action to rectify them--to protect others, stave off danger, and ensure things operate smoothly. This quality can easily play a central role in your livelihood. You have a very high tendency to be controlling in your dealing with systems, procedures, or people.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

Much of the time your energy flows to thoughts and activities that ensure there is harmony and balance in your environment, and even possibly in other locales as well. You are inspired by the pursuit of truth and keenly engage in conversation or initiatives that get to the bottom of things. You typically spot injustice or non-compliance with procedures and rectify them as it takes only a little effort to get into action. You like rules and procedures--and also when people follow them. You could make this quality a part of what you do for your livelihood, though might not make it the main part. You tend to be controlling in your dealing with systems, procedures, or people.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to engaging your protective tendencies, you have moderate inspiration to act. Sometimes you feel inspired to ensure that mistakes are rectified, that things aren't wasted, or that justice is served. Procedures are not your forte. While this drive doesn't naturally come on strong, it does surface from time to time. And once you get into it--whether it's preserving your teams or something cultural or environmental, you enjoy the process. The challenge is crossing that threshold. Having this quality as part of your work is a possibility, though you might think twice if it were demanded excessively. You tend to leave the controlling of systems, procedures, or people to others, though you tend to comply with what is asked of you.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

The protective tendency is not something that comes often or easily. On occasion, you encounter situations where something dangerous or wrong arises. Your immediate reaction is to let things slide, not wanting to invest the energy it would require to set things straight. In arguments, if there is a person who is wrong, but ready to argue profusely, you'd find it easier to let them win rather than to make the effort to prove them wrong. And if you spot errors in a document such as a spelling or design mistake, you might say something to authority, though doing so would almost always be an effort in your mind. It’s likely not a domain you would want to incorporate as the main part of your work activities. You tend to leave the controlling of systems, procedures, or people to others, though you make a conscious effort to comply. Even though you think procedures, norms and rules are valuable, you don't always follow them

2-3 (Low)

Things such as rules and procedures are things that don’t affect the way you think. You have a more “live and let live” approach to life. Even though you think procedures, norms and rules are valuable, you find them irritating and exhausting to follow. You move through life in a manner that does not get involved in pointing out or rectifying the shortcomings or problems in organizations or systems. You feel people should learn from their own mistakes, and when they do, things will take care of themselves.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

Your drive towards protection, security and justice may not be as strong as others. You tend to take a more relaxed approach and may not feel compelled to act in situations where rules, procedures or safety measures are not being followed. You are more inclined to let things unfold naturally and may not take a lead in rectifying problems or injustices. This quality is not a significant aspect of your professional activities and you tend to leave the controlling of systems, procedures, or people to others.

Educative Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an unparalleled talent for training and educating others. You have a natural ability to understand and articulate complex concepts in a way that even those with limited understanding can grasp. Your ability to explain things so clearly and effectively makes you a valuable asset in any setting, and you likely find yourself constantly educating others in various contexts. Teaching, advising, and mentoring others is not only a pleasure for you, it is a compulsion. You live to share your knowledge and see others succeed as a result of your guidance.

8-8.5 (High)

You really enjoy learning, discovering, and passing on your knowledge. You have an extremely strong tendency to explain things to others in ways they understand. In fact, you can quickly assess what and why others don't get something and can provide examples, analogies, and information that enables the lights to go on in others' heads. You instinctively know how to adapt or adjust yourself to their level so they get you. You get a lot of energy from patiently providing instructions, giving feedback, and hoping others improve their performance. You also have a knack for simplifying concepts and getting others to focus on the essentials. This is surely a quality that you could incorporate at the center of what you do. You have the patience to teach others, even if they don't understand.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You tend to want to explain things to others in ways they can understand. With a little focus, you can figure out what they don’t know and adapt yourself--your language and examples, to make things clear. You find it enjoyable and satisfying when you help someone "get it", and you get energy from situations where you can put your educational capacity to use. You tend to be good at giving feedback and helping others improve their performance. In most cases, you can simplify concepts and get people to focus on the essentials. At the same time, you might not want to be doing such activities extensively or to the exclusion of others. At the same time, you wouldn’t want to engage in this at the expense of other activities

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to educating or training others, you have mixed feelings. Sometimes you find it hard to get into others’ heads to try to understand what they don't understand. However, when you apply yourself, you can usually figure out how to express things so the other person gets it. You are ready to explain things clearly once or twice. After that, your patience may start to wear thin. Spending time doing activities of this sort is OK in moderation, though too much time engaged in teaching or instruction would likely drain your battery. Applying your Educative Nature is something you might prefer to do occasionally, though not as a mainstay of your work.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

Educating or training others is not something that really resonates with you. You find it rather hard to get into others' heads to try to understand what they don't understand. It would take a lot of energy and focus, though you could eventually figure out how to express things in a way that helps others understand. When people ask for guidance or clarification, you might immediately think to refer them to someone else. You typically don't offer detailed feedback. This is a quality you might not want to spend a significant amount of your time focusing on for your main course of work compared to other qualities.

2-3 (Low)

Educating or training others is something that doesn't resonate with you at all. You find it extremely hard to get into others' heads to understand what they don't understand. It would take a tremendous amount of energy to find ways of expressing things so others can "get it". When people ask for guidance or clarification, you immediately seek out ways to avoid answering, as the energy required to do so just seems like too much to expend. You rarely if ever provide detailed feedback to others, and have very little patience to explain things--especially more than once.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

Educating or training others is not something that interests you. You may find it hard to understand what others don't understand and may struggle to find ways to explain things in a way that makes sense to them. You may prefer to refer others to someone else for guidance or clarification, and may not feel inclined to offer detailed feedback. While you may not have a strong desire to engage in activities related to teaching or instruction, it is not necessarily a negative trait and may be more beneficial for you to focus on other qualities that align better with your interests.

Administrative Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You have an extraordinary ability and insatiable appetite for organization. You apply this to every aspect of your life, ensuring that each and every thing in live is part of a structured and coherent plan and process. Your ability to prioritize tasks delegate responsibilities, and achieving objectives is legendary. This is true for your work individually and especially when you work as part of a team. This ability is a central part of your professional and personal life. Other people naturally accept you as an organiser and you are constantly complimented for your awe-inspiring capacity in this area.

8-8.5 (High)

You have an exceptionally strong tendency to organize things and keep stuff in order. From basic things such as your home or workspace to projects and events, you intuitively know how to prioritize, execute, and get things done. You keep on top of everything--even small details, rarely forget something and have an excellent capacity to manage time and delegate responsibility. Your mind naturally gravitates toward these kinds of activities, and it energizes you to set schedules, creates to-do lists, and meets deadlines. You could easily make this domain a central part of your work or life's activities. You tend to organize, delegate and ensure the timely completion of work by others or yourself. Always have a plan of action and a detailed calendar. Remember not to miss deadlines or be late.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a strong tendency to organize things and keep stuff in order. Your home and work area are places that you generally keep neat and tidy. When given projects or events to manage, you can also rise to the occasion to ensure things are structured and planned well. It does take a little effort to get things moving or to sustain such activities for long periods. You're not afraid of schedules, to-do lists, and delegating responsibilities, and you find it pleasurable to meet deadlines. However, you do feel some limits in this area, and would not necessarily enjoy doing administrative activities all the time.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to organizing things, you have a mixed reaction. At times, you can get into the spirit of getting stuff in order--your home or workplace. But at other times you let it slide as it can take quite a bit of energy to get into structuring and keeping track of tasks, people, and things. Deadlines, tasks, and schedules can positively motivate you--but up to a point. You can be forgetful at times and find it challenging to prioritize, multitask, or delegate responsibility. In fact, too much demand for administration can start to burn you out. You feel more likely to get things into order when you have the time to do it and when there's not much else on your plate.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

Organizing and keeping things in order is something you might appreciate but find a hard time doing. When tasks or stuff begin to pile up, it can wear you out just thinking about how to get it all done or organized. You prefer to go about things your own way, and only when things start to get out of hand do you muster up the energy to straighten it all out. You can find some small pleasure in establishing some order in your home or office, though you know the next time you do it won't be anytime soon. Multitasking, planning, and prioritizing are not your cup of tea, and in your eyes, such tasks would be best-taken care of by others so you can focus on other areas you find important and enjoyable.

2-3 (Low)

Keeping things organized is not something that resonates with you. Whether it's straightening out your room or organizing your schedule, the thought of getting things in order can drain your battery. It takes a tremendous amount of effort--or an extremely compelling reason--to structure the different aspects of your life. You have your own way of approaching work and life that steers clear of too much structure and order. Planning, prioritizing, and multitasking are surely not activities that resonate with you. Even if you like things to be neat, it’s something you would far prefer others do so you can focus on things that are more important to you.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You have very little interest or ability in organizing and keeping things in order. The idea of schedules, to-do lists, and delegating responsibilities is overwhelming and unappealing to you. You prefer to go with the flow and let things happen naturally, rather than trying to control and structure every aspect of your life. You find it extremely difficult to keep track of tasks and deadlines, and struggle with maintaining a clean and organized home or workspace. This is not something you would naturally gravitate towards as a career or even in your personal life.

Creative Nature

9-10 (Very High)

Generating new ideas is something you can be proud of. Activities such as idea exploration or problem solving are of great interest to you and you could devote all your time to them, regardless of the specific field. It does not require any effort on your part and when you do it you feel a surge of energy. You are the kind of person who always has something to offer, your creative potential is inexhaustible and you come up with original ideas and solutions. Activities such as searching for ideas or solving problems are part of your professional or leisure activities.

8-8.5 (High)

Your creative capacity is enormous. Your mind is like a fountain, constantly spewing out ideas and finding new ways of doing things. Activities such as brainstorming or problem solving totally energize you and you can get completely absorbed in the process. You have a remarkable capacity for looking at things differently from others, pointing out connections between things that they seem to miss. Your attention quickly gravitates toward novelty, and you quickly get bored from routine. If you could spend most of your time using your innovative prowess, you would find it incredibly appealing and rewarding.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a strong creative capacity. When you put your mind to it, you can generate lots of new ideas and new ways of doing things. Activities such as brainstorming and problem solving energize you, and you can sometimes get really absorbed in the process. When challenges arise, your mind can find interesting connections that others might not see. You can get bored from routine, and you like exercising your creative tendencies when opportunities arise. If you could spend a significant part of your time using your innovativeness, you would find it greatly satisfying. However, spending all your time in that domain might be more than you would like.

5-6 (Medium)

It takes a bit of focus, but when you apply yourself, you have the capacity to be creative. While you can get stuck at times, you can usually come up with ideas and solutions that are original and innovative. Activates such as brainstorming and problem solving certainly appeal to you, though engaging in them for long periods of time can drain your batteries. You do appreciate novelty, though in moderation; routine, for you, can also be quite satisfying. Creative pursuits might not appeal to you as the mainstay of your work, but if they play a part, you wouldn't mind.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

Being creative is something you tend to shy away from. Activities such as brainstorming and problem solving have limited appeal to you. Getting into them requires a lot of effort and doing them for any period takes quite a bit of energy. When it comes to thinking up new ideas or ways of doing things, you're not likely the person who generates the best suggestions, however, you occasionally surprise yourself with an original idea that has value. Still, you would most likely seek out someone else when a creative challenge arises. You are a bigger fan of routine as opposed to doing things differently all the time. As such, activities in this domain would likely not appeal to you for a regular part of what you do in your work.

2-3 (Low)

Being creative is something that doesn't come easy to you. Activities such as brainstorming and problem solving are alien activities that you avoid at all costs. They require tremendous effort and doing them demands a huge amount of energy. When it comes to thinking up new ideas or novel ways of doing things, you're almost never the persona who comes up with the best suggestions. Though you may come up with original ideas here or there, they might not always be practical ones. Where originality is required, you seek out others who have a greater creative capacity. You are very happy with routine and tend to like the way things are. As such, doing activities in this domain would not appeal to you for a regular part of what you do in your work.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

Creative thinking is not something that comes naturally to you. Activities such as brainstorming and problem solving feel like a chore to you, and require a lot of effort and energy. You tend to struggle with coming up with new ideas or unique solutions, and often rely on others to generate creative ideas. You are more comfortable with routine and prefer to stick to tried and true methods. Engaging in creative activities is not something you would seek out as a regular part of your work or leisure activities.

Healing Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an extraordinary ability and an insatiable appetite for helping others with psychological or health problems. Your ability to sense and understand the emotional and physical well-being of others is truly remarkable. You have a natural intuition that allows you to quickly "read" people and offer suggestions on how to help. You find great joy and satisfaction in getting involved in this kind of activity and it could easily be a major part of your career or hobby. You have a genuine passion for helping others and an unwavering dedication to their healing and well-being.

8-8.5 (High)

You have an extremely strong tendency to help others out of pain and to find balance and help them "birth" their solutions. You feel a kind of intuition that can sense when people are out of alignment. Unconsciously, you begin finding ways to communicate with others about their condition. When others share their specific problems or ailments--family, friends, or even strangers--you get energized and absorbed in their state of wellbeing. It takes no effort from you to expand yourself into this domain, and you feel you could easily make this aspect of you a central part of your life's activities.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a very strong tendency to help others out of pain and to find balance. You have a sense of when people are not in alignment. It interests you to know more about their conditions and to find solutions to help bring them back to their normal selves. When you get focused, you can derive a lot of pleasure from these types of activities and get absorbed for some time. After a while, you might need to change the channel for some time, which is why you might feel doing activities of this type might be OK as a part of what you do, though not necessarily the central part.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to tuning into others' pain and imbalance, you can be on or off depending on the circumstance and finding solutions to their problems. When you focus and make the effort to tune in, you have a decent sense of when people are not in alignment. In some instances, you take an interest to know more about their conditions and finding solutions to help bring them back to their normal selves. On other occasions, you might not gravitate toward these activities, as the energy required to do so might be more than you can invest. While you would likely attempt to tune into the level of well-being of family and friends, you might not be as willing to lend your healing capacity to people you are not as close to.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

When it comes to tuning into others' pain and imbalance, you are typically a little reserved. It requires significant effort to tend to others' states of wellbeing. While you don't actively engage friends and family when they are out of alignment, you can muster up the energy to inquire about how they are doing, though perhaps mostly to be polite. Still, you are not likely inclined to accompany them on the path to finding a solution to their health issues, instead of hoping someone else might do the needful to get them the help they need. Your healing capacity is likely not one you would likely want to engage regularly as a part of your working activities.

2-3 (Low)

When it comes to tuning in to others' pain and imbalance, you do not feel a sense of ease or comfort. It requires a tremendous effort on your behalf to tend to others' states of wellbeing. You rarely if ever engage friends and family when they are out of alignment, and even when asked directly for help, you might make a veiled attempt to demonstrate interest, though, you would probably find a way to excuse yourself or recommend engaging someone else who could be more effective. Your healing capacity is most likely one you would not want to engage, even peripherally, as part of your working activities.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

Your interest and ability in helping others with psychological or health problems is practically non-existent. You do not possess a natural intuition for sensing the emotional and physical well-being of others, and you find it difficult to understand or relate to their problems. You do not find any joy or satisfaction in getting involved in this kind of activity and it is not something that would be a part of your career or hobby. You might not have any particular passion or dedication for helping others with their healing and well-being, and you might find it difficult to empathize with them.

Entertaining (Presentations) Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You have a very strong ability to draw attention to yourself and your actions, and know how to speak in front of an audience. You can add humour and enthusiasm to any situation. Your ability to capture the attention of others is undeniable. Presentations and performances are an integral part of your daily work or hobby. You feel a special ease and enjoyment in doing so.

8-8.5 (High)

You have an extremely strong tendency to attract attention--to yourself and your work. You enjoy leading meetings or presentations, and speaking in front of an audience, even an unfamiliar one, excites you. And you know intuitively how to liven up situations with humor and enthusiasm. When things start to get too boring, you spring into action and stir people's thoughts and emotions. It's something you do without even thinking about it--and something you do in almost every situation (even formal ones where you're supposed to be more restrained!). But the facts are there, animating, and entertaining others gives you great energy , whether , with words, images, or your body and you are very often the spokespeople for a group or team. Your capacity is unstoppable and has the potential to be a central part of your main work activities.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You know how to liven up situations with humor and enthusiasm. You can easily lead a meeting or a group, and you're not frightened by the idea of public speaking. When things start to get boring, you frequently step in and stir others' thoughts and emotions. Though it's not something you do all the time, you do it rather easily. Just a little focus and effort and you can brighten the mood or situation with words, pictures, or movement. It gives you the energy to amuse others, and your capacity to do so sometimes surprises you and those you aim to entertain. While you enjoy the limelight much of the time, it's not a place you'd like to be all the time. This capacity is something you could surely keep as a regular part of your work activities.

5-6 (Medium)

When it comes to presenting your work, facilitating a meeting or entertaining others, you're not necessarily the person who's eager to take center stage. In fact, sometimes, you'd prefer to stay in the background and let others take the lead in stimulating the conversation or getting a group to be livelier. It's not to say you can't do it. You can. However, your engagement in this domain requires deliberate focus and effort--which often results in the intended result, and other times winds up falling flat. You don't define yourself as the type of person to entertain or enliven others, and you rely on the occasional joke to liven things up .

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

As far as entertaining people go, this is not something you easily relate to. You watch others amuse friends and colleagues, and marvel at their capacity to do so. It's almost like a foreign language to you. Having to sustain conversations, inspire a group of colleagues, or perform publicly takes quite a bit of energy and preparation, and is something you would try to avoid if you could. You are happier on the sidelines, letting the entertainers be the centers of attention, although occasionally, with a bit of coaxing, you might be agreeable to step out and surprise others with something that jazzes things up. Infrequent as it may be, your displaying this capacity doesn't bother you so much--as long as it's done in a safe and comfortable situation.

2-3 (Low)

As far as entertaining people go, this is not something you relate to at all. You watch others amuse friends and colleagues, and marvel at their capacity to do so. It's like a foreign language to you. Public speaking scares you, and it seems like a superhuman skill when you observe it in others. Having to sustain conversations, inspire a group of colleagues, perform publicly takes an enormous amount of energy and preparation, and is something you would only do out of compulsion--and with a great deal of coaxing. You are happy to remain on the sidelines and let those with the entertaining capacity be the centers of attention.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

As for being able to attract the attention of others, that is something that is alien to you. Making conversation, inspiring people or making public appearances are not your thing. As far back as you can remember, you have never done it, and if you had to, you tried to get away with it.

Providing Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You have an incredibly strong inclination to help and be of service to others, you truly thrive on being able to assist and aid those around you. Your intuition in this area is highly developed, you have a unique ability to predict what others need before they even say anything. Serving or helping others is a natural and integral part of your daily life, whether it be through your profession or through regular volunteer work and community service. It brings you a deep sense of fulfillment and satisfaction to be able to make a positive impact on the lives of those around you.

8-8.5 (High)

You have an extremely strong tendency to give, help, and serve others. If people ask for assistance, you are ready to stop whatever you're doing to lend them a hand. In fact, you have such a strong sense in this regard, that you can even anticipate what others need before they even say something. Remembering birthdays and anniversaries comes naturally to you, and gift-giving is an art form--to choose a present that's a perfect fit. You jump at the chance to volunteer for various causes. In short, exercising your providing tendencies energizes you, and you know you would benefit by making it a central part of what you do in life.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a tendency to give help and serve others. When people ask for assistance, you are usually ready to stop whatever you are doing to lend them a hand. Activities to give of yourself, such as volunteering, are appealing to you, and you try to find ways to fit them into your schedule. You typically remember people's preferences--what they like to eat or wear, and when possible, aim to find ways to make them comfortable. In short, exercising your providing tendencies energizes you. And while you might not prefer to make it a central part of what you do in life, it certainly can play a strong role.

5-6 (Medium)

You like to give help and serve others —if you have the time to do so. When people ask for assistance, you consider the circumstances, and if all is well, you provide them with the support they need. You would not likely go overboard with your inputs, and when the job is done, you would consider the task complete. While the idea of volunteering appeals to you, it’s not something you make a priority, though, on occasion, you find a way to help others for a good cause. Exercising your providing tendencies takes a bit of energy and effort. This is a quality that you would likely not want to incorporate as a central part of your work or life activities.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

When it comes to helping and serving others, it takes a bit of energy to get you motivated. While you recognize doing so would make you and others feel good, often the effort to do so outweighs your desire to act. If others ask for assistance, you will first seek out solutions or suggestions for them to solve their problem without your involvement. However, if they really push you, you will agree to do so, though a little reluctantly. Remembering birthdays and gift-giving are not your forte, nor is doing volunteer work. In general, helping others remains something you reserve for family or people who are close to you.

2-3 (Low)

When it comes to helping and serving others, it takes a huge amount of energy to get you motivated. Often the effort required to assist others overshadows the benefits of assisting them. When people come to you for help, you usually decline unless it is an absolute emergency. You're not someone who tends to remember people's birthdays or anniversaries, nor do you engage yourself in gift-giving. Volunteer work is not your cup of tea either. Helping others remains something you reserve for only close family members or friends--and that too, only when you have the time and energy.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

Assisting and serving others is a concept that is completely foreign to you. The idea of helping others, whether it be through volunteering or providing support, is something that you tend to avoid at all costs. You have a strong inclination to solve problems and provide solutions on your own, and the thought of having to depend on others or assist them in any capacity is not something that appeals to you. The effort and energy required to engage in such activities is not something you are willing to invest.

Entrepreneurial Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You have a very strong tendency to spot and seize the right opportunities. This may be in a financial, social, environmental or cultural context. Your mind is constantly scanning the environment, searching for new opportunities, and you quickly recognize and act on them. You are known for your foresight and resourcefulness, and you are often praised for your ability to identify and capitalize on opportunities. You are confident in your ability to achieve significant results in this area, and you have a proven track record of success in this regard.

8-8.5 (High)

You have a knack for seeing and seeking out opportunities. You intuitively see novel ways to bring together people, ideas, and resources to create value--financial, social, environmental, cultural, or otherwise. Your mind constantly scans the world for new technologies, systems, products, or services, and you get energized to pitch your concepts to others. However, nothing gets you going more than realizing your vision--whether it be small or grand. Somehow, you just know how to persuade people, which is why you're excellent at negotiating and making deals that speak to everyone's interests. You prefer to work independently to realize your projects. While money is an important aspect of your thinking, what's more, important to you is the value of money. The idea of entrepreneurship appeals to you greatly.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a tendency to see and seek out opportunities. When you focus and make a little effort, you can find novel ways to bring together people, ideas, and resources to create value. This could be financial, social, environmental, or cultural. Your mind often scans the world for new technologies, systems, products, or services, and you enjoy pitching your concepts to others. In the right contexts, you can persuade people and are good at negotiating deals that make everyone pleased. Though you enjoy working independently, you tend to prefer someone with greater capacity takes the lead when things get too complex or challenging. Entrepreneurship in general appeals to you.

5-6 (Medium)

On occasion, you see opportunities to make money or create value, though you don't necessarily pursue them. The idea of being an entrepreneur or working independently appeals to you, although it’s not something you would feel comfortable doing as a central part of your work. You sometimes think about new technologies, systems, products, or services, and how great they could be; however, these tend to be more musings than plans you would like to realize. If asked to take on projects or contribute to an innovative project, you would participate, though would likely pass off the heavy lifting to people more capable in this domain. Activities such as negotiating have limited appeal, and you sometimes feel uncomfortable when it comes to bargaining or striking deals.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

When it comes to activities such as negotiating, you don't feel very comfortable. If you have to bargain with someone, you tend to like to get things over with, even if it means you don't get the best deal possible. Coming up with ideas for new products or services would take quite a bit of effort, and if asked for your inputs in this area, you'd give it a try--and might have an idea or two, but would want to pass the task on to someone more capable in this domain. Becoming a freelancer or running a company or startup is not very appealing to you. As such, you would be much happier letting those people put together the organizations and find your place to do your work within them.

2-3 (Low)

When it comes to activities such as negotiating, you don't feel comfortable at all. If you have to bargain with someone, you tend to like to get things over with, even if it means you don't get the best deal possible. Coming up with ideas for new products or services would take a tremendous amount of effort, and if asked for your inputs in this area, you'd surely pass the task on to someone more capable in this domain. You would find it frightening to have to be a freelancer or to start or run a company or organization. When you watch entrepreneurs at work, you find their ways somewhat mysterious. As such, you would be much happier letting those people put together the organizations and find your place to do your work within them.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You have very little inclination to spot and pursue opportunities, whether they be financial, social, or cultural. You tend to stick to familiar and safe paths, and are not inclined to venture into uncharted territories. You may find yourself not being able to see the potential in new ideas or projects and would likely pass on them without giving them much thought. Working for yourself or freelancing don’t appeal to you, and you are more comfortable working within a pre-existing organization or company.

Adventurous Nature

9-10 (Very High)

You possess an innate drive for adventure and pushing boundaries. You are always on the lookout for new and exciting experiences, and you thrive when pushing yourself to the limits. You are not satisfied with the status quo and are constantly seeking out new challenges and opportunities for growth. You are known for your fearless and bold nature and have a reputation for taking risks and achieving extraordinary results. Whether in your personal or professional life, you are constantly seeking out new frontiers to conquer and have a deep desire to leave a lasting impact.

8-8.5 (High)

You have a strong tendency to seek out adventure. When it comes to just about any activity, you enjoy pushing the limits to see how far you can go. You get energized from taking risks and exploring the unknown and choose spontaneity over routine. If you have an option, you prefer the path less taken, especially if there's an element of danger involved. Engaging in adventurous activities doesn't take any special effort, though when you apply yourself in this domain, you can do remarkable things, which others consider to be extraordinary. Traveling, experimenting, and competing with others (or even with yourself) are ways that you apply this tendency.

6.5-7.5 (Medium-High)

You have a tendency to seek out adventure. You frequently like pushing the limits to see how far you can go. You can get quite a bit of energy from taking risks and exploring the unknown. While a little bit of routine in your life is important, you often prefer to be spontaneous and keep open to the possibilities that arise naturally. Often, you choose the path less taken even if it's a little unsure or dangerous. Engaging in adventurous activities takes a little bit of effort, and when you apply yourself in this domain, you can surprise others and yourself with what you can accomplish. You are inclined to travel, experiment, and compete with others (and even with yourself). This tendency can become a key part of your work or life activities.

5-6 (Medium)

On occasion, you like to explore your adventurous side. When the time is right, you enjoy pushing your limits, though when you're too far outside your comfort zone, you like to get back to normalcy and stability. You can be spontaneous at times, and even choose the path less traveled, though if things appear too risky or dangerous, you're likely to take the beaten path. It takes some effort and energy to engage in adventurous types of activities, though when you make an effort, you can sometimes surprise yourself. Travel, experimentation, and competition are words that pique your curiosity, though they don't necessarily drive you.

3.5-4.5 (Medium-Low)

You tend to be a bit reluctant when it comes to engaging your adventurous tendencies. You don't really enjoy pushing your limits or going too far outside of your comfort zone. Situations that are more stable and predictable appeal to you much more. If things seem too risky or dangerous, you’re more likely to give them a pass. You would not consider yourself spontaneous, though, in certain circumstances, you can apply yourself and deviate from the routine. Experimentation and competition are not things that drive you. You'd far prefer to watch others engage themselves in such activities where you can watch safely from the sidelines.

2-3 (Low)

You are averse to anything you'd consider adventurous. You prefer to work within your limits and stay well within your comfort zone. Situations that are stable and predictable appeal to you much more than ones that appear risky or dangerous. When others act spontaneously, or when things become a bit chaotic, it unnerves you. You are far more comfortable relying on various routines. You avoid competition and experimentation, as doing so demands far too much energy and effort. When activities arise that incorporate adventure, risk, or danger, you defer to others, and in most cases, find it too disturbing to even watch them or hear about their escapades.

0.5-1.5 (Very Low)

You have a strong aversion to taking risks and engaging in adventurous activities. The idea of pushing your limits or stepping outside of your comfort zone is unappealing to you. You prefer stability and predictability in your life and tend to avoid situations that may involve danger or uncertainty. Even the thought of experimenting or competing with others can cause you discomfort. You have likely never sought out adventure in your life and would avoid it altogether if given the choice.